

Statement, question, exclamation or command?

Are these sentences statements, questions, exclamations or commands? Cut them out and sort them into four piles.

John Terry has just scored a goal!

What time does the match start?

Go and put your bag in the changing room.

Can you see David Beckham?

The pitch has just been mown.

Kick the ball to Robert.

That was fantastic playing, well done!

Which player kicked that ball?

This is the best match I've ever seen!

The players are ready for the match.

Leave the pitch now.

We're winners!

The players are wearing red.

Where is the ice-cream stall?

Answers: All the sentences ending with exclamation marks are exclamations. All the sentences ending with question marks are questions. 'Go and put your bag in the changing room,' 'Kick the ball to Robert,' and 'Leave the pitch now,' are commands. The rest of the sentences are statements.